*'Watching kids read; Magic. Teaching them to read; Science'
When we know better, we do better.*

So true, and as a teacher with over 25 years of teaching experience, I knew there was more to learn. In the classroom setting, there were often times I was left perplexed as to why capable and bright kids were not coping with literacy. In 2017 I trained extensively, and specialised in Multisensory Structured Literacy Intervention. I now understand the science and am able to facilitate the magic so it can happen, particularly for those students with literacy difficulties. As an accredited member of the international Dyslexia Association (AMADA) I have been working in an intervention role with predominantly dyslexic students for over 5 years. I have also had the privilege of presenting to numerous motivated teachers along with working alongside a school during their whole school implementation of a Structured Literacy framework.

I thoroughly enjoy working with the dedicated team here at Ace Education. We stay current with the science (evidence based research) and ensure we are up to date with our professional learning. Every learner we work with receives instruction that is explicit and personalised to their needs. The Ace team works collaboratively and we all love to see 'the light go on' for our students.
